    Lake told Newsbytes that the Wordcraft system is known as Automatic Fax Services (AFS) and consists of four elements: authentication , message confirmation, integrated encryption, and a certificate of receipt.
    The authentication element of AFS revolves the generation of the fax device's serial number and unique transaction number for each fax transmission. Message confirmation is generated by the distant fax device, while the certificate of receipt is printed after confirmation is received.
    "Existing fax transmission reports are just that -- a note of transmission. AGS creates a new document, a certificate of...
